

EISENHOWER, DWIGHT D.: POST-PRESIDENTIAL PAPERS, 1961-69

1963 PRINCIPAL FILE

SERIES DESCRIPTION

The 1963 Principal File served as the main office file for Dwight D. Eisenhower's Gettysburg office. It is divided into two subseries--a subject, or topical, file and an alphabetical file. The subject subseries contains such categories as appointments, autographs, endorsements, gifts, invitations, memberships, messages, politics, publications, statements, and trips. This subseries is comprised of a little over thirty-one boxes, and it is arranged in alphabetical order by name of subject category. Invitations are the category which generated the greatest volume of correspondence by far, and it was followed by appointments, gifts, and messages. The alphabetical subseries consists of nearly thirty-nine boxes of materials arranged in alphabetical order by names of individuals and organizations. It is primarily a correspondence file, although it contains a sprinkling of other types of documents, including speeches, published materials, lists, statements, minutes of meetings, and transcripts of interviews.

This series reveals that the volume of Eisenhower's correspondence was continuing to grow, placing an increasing burden on his staff, who answered most inquiries, on friends, such as Bryce Harlow who often drafted letters for Eisenhower on politically sensitive subjects, and on Dwight Eisenhower himself, who continued to edit a lot of correspondence with friends and acquaintances. The increased strain on Eisenhower and his staff resources is revealed in the many letters which turned down requests for appointments, autographs, speeches, endorsements, and special messages from the former president.

The bulk of this series consists of routine correspondence and related materials. However, there are numerous letters and memoranda which discuss national and international events, issues, and personalities. The space program, taxes, the New Frontier, People to People, the Test Ban Treaty, the assassination of President Kennedy, NATO, the U.S. defense budget, World War II, the stockpiling of strategic materials, the upcoming presidential election and prospective Republican candidates, foreign aid, and the missile program are subjects discussed in Eisenhower's correspondence. Other topics mentioned in this series include the writing of Mandate for Change, Freedoms Foundation, Eisenhower's future role in political campaigns, Republicanism (definition of), presidential disability, Radio Liberty, Radio Free Europe, American Assembly, Robert Welch, the John Birch Society, Cuba, Barry Goldwater, Henry Cabot Lodge, Emmet John Hughes, the Republican defeat in 1960, and U.S.-Canada relations.

In 1963 Dwight Eisenhower continued to correspond with many prominent individuals. Harold Macmillan, President Mateos of Mexico, Winston Churchill, and Anthony Eden were some of the foreign leaders Eisenhower continued to have contact with. Prominent Americans who corresponded with him included Barry Goldwater, William Scranton, William S. Paley, Charles Percy, George Romney, Walter Cronkite, Leonard Firestone, Fred Waring, Arnold Palmer, Joyce Hall, Leonard Hall, Lucius Clay, Omar Bradley, Fred Friendly, Walt Disney, Lauris Norstad, and Walter Lippmann. Former members of the Eisenhower Administration also kept in touch with their ex-boss--both thru correspondence and occasional visits to Gettysburg. Bryce Harlow, Harold Stassen, Jim Hagerty, Richard Nixon, Nelson Rockefeller, Allen Dulles, Sherman Adams, Ezra Taft Benson, Herbert Brownell, C. D. Jackson, Henry Cabot Lodge, Bernard Shanley, Clarence Francis, Arthur Burns, Raymond J. Saulnier, John S. Bragdon, and Leonard V. Finder all made some contact with Eisenhower in 1963.

This series also contains considerable documentation relating to Eisenhower's personal views and attitudes on a wide range of subjects. There are comments on his favorite beverage, favorite Bible verse, his policy on honorariums, his policy regarding the use of his name, an old football injury, a late 1940s illness, books he read as a boy, why he stayed in the Army, his policy on writing commendatory letters, Eisenhower's views on the press and interviews, and his conditions for playing in a celebrity golf match. His responses to criticism by Robert Welch, Emmet John Hughes, Barry Goldwater, and others are recorded in this series. In addition, there is information on such mundane matters as personal automobiles, an Angus sale, personal investments, doodling, his membership in various organizations and associations, Eisenhower's medication, and the fact that he stopped smoking in 1949. These files provide many insights into Eisenhower the man, and they document his very active post-presidential life.
