This collection consists of a series of drafts and other materials pertaining to John S. D. Eisenhower’s book, The Bitter Woods, a history of the Ardennes Campaign in the Battle of the Bulge. A substantial proportion of the background material concerns events at Lanzerath, St. Vith, and the Malmedy massacre. John S. D. Eisenhower interviewed or corresponded with a number of senior American and British commanders, as well as some lower-ranking soldiers, and a few German officers. Some of the most noteworthy persons he consulted include Omar Bradley, Norman Cota, J. Lawton Collins, Walter Cronkite, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Sir Francis de Guingand, Bernard Law Montgomery, Matthew Ridgway, Kenneth Strong, Maxwell Taylor, Hasso von Manteuffel, Jachen Peiper, and Otto Skorzeny. He also used contemporary military records and interviews of captured German officers.

Perhaps the most notable item is an unpublished interview John S. D. Eisenhower conducted with his father, Dwight D. Eisenhower. The subject was Eisenhower’s impressions of and relationship with Charles DeGaulle; however, it veered into a discussion of the French experience in Vietnam and the danger of Communist advance in Southeast Asia. The transcript contains uncommonly candid remarks by Dwight Eisenhower.

Eisenhower also provided occasional comments on drafts of chapters that JSDE sent him for review.
