1110 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1243-1244

The 2nd Infantry Regiment was a component part of the 5th Infantry Division. This Division was activated in 1939 but did not enter combat until it landed on Utah Beach, Normandy, three days after D-Day. For the remainder of the war in Europe the Division participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe campaigns.

The records of the 2nd Infantry Regiment consist mostly of after action reports and journals which provide detailed accounts of the operations of the Regiment from July 1944 to May 1945. The records also contain correspondence on the early history of the Regiment prior to World War II and to its training activities in the United States prior to entering combat. Of particular importance is a file on the work of the Regiment while serving on occupation duty in Iceland in 1942.

The 13th Infantry Regiment was a component unit of the 8th Infantry Division, which participated in the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns. The Regiment landed at Utah Beach on July 4, 1944, and pushed its way across France, clearing Rennes and Brest by September. From there the Regiment moved to Luxembourg and Germany, reaching the Rhine River on March 7, 1945. On April 6, 1945, it attacked northwest to aid in the destruction of enemy forces in the Ruhr Pocket. After completing this mission the regiment performed security duties until May 1, when the 3rd Battalion crossed the Elbe and advanced until the end of the war.

This series consists of after action reports which give detailed accounts of the Regiment's operations from July, 1944 to the end of the war. Casualty lists and awards records are also included in the reports. For additional information, see the 8th Infantry Division.

The 14th Infantry Regiment, as a component unit of the 71st Infantry Division, participated in the Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns. The Regiment landed at Le Havre, France, on February 7, 1945, and moved to Camp Old Gold for training. The 14th Regiment served under three armies during the month of March. It completed its training under the Fifteenth Army and participated in the Sarre-Mosel cleanup under the Seventh Army. In April the Regiment fought through central and southern Germany, capturing such important cities as Bayreuth, Regensburg, and Amberg before advancing on to the Austrian border. On May 8 the regiment made contact with the Russian Army east of Linz. After hostilities ended, the 14th Infantry Regiment was assigned occupational duties until March, 1946.

This series contains unit histories which give detailed accounts of the operations of the 14th Infantry Regiment from March to May, 1945. Of special interest are the instruments of surrender of the towns of Regensburg and Amberg.

15th INFANTRY REGIMENT

3600 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1258-1263

The 15th Infantry Regiment was a component unit of the 3rd Infantry Division—the only American Division which fought the on all fronts in Africa and Europe. The Regiment participated in the Algeria-French Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, Southern France, and Ardennes-Alsace campaigns.

The “Can Do” Regiment was one of the most decorated units of the war. It participated in several of the bloodiest battles, including the landings at Salerno, Anzio, and St. Tropez. The regiment also took part in the Vosges Mountains Winter Campaign, which culminated in the break-through of German defenses and the dash to the borders of the Reich. The 15th helped clear the Colmar Pocket, and smashed through defenses to cross the Rhine River on March 26, 1945. After fierce block-block fighting, the city of Nurnberg was taken on April 20, and the Regiment pushed on to take Augsburg and Munich. The 15th was in the vicinity of Salburg when the war ended on May 7, 1945.

The series is divided into four subseries which are arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch. The largest of these is the S-3 subseries, which is mostly made up of journal files. These journal files contain journals, operations instructions, and miscellaneous memoranda concerning the operations of the S-3 section from 1943-1945.

Of special interest is the narrative history, located in the General Historical subseries. This narrative describes the activities of the Regiment from its landing in French Morocco to its breakthrough into Germany. Also included in the General Historical subseries are three scrapbooks, one of which contains information concerning the Regiment’s training, while another contains news clippings covering its activities in France. The third scrapbook consists of photographs dealing with the use of federal troops at the North American Aviation Plant in Inglewood, California in June of 1941. This scrapbook has been removed to the Audiovisual Collection of the Eisenhower Library.

The 16th Infantry was an organic component of the 1st Infantry Division. The division shipped out of New York harbor aboard the cruise liner Queen Mary, August 2, 1942, the first complete U.S. division to leave for any theater of operations. The Regiment arrived at the Tidworth Barracks, near Salisbury, England, by August 10. At Tidworth Barracks the regiment gained extensive training in small unit tactics, and from September 23 to October 25 engaged in strenuous amphibious landing exercises followed by "speed marches" inland. The Regiment was one of the initial assault units picked for the invasion of North Africa on November 8, 1942, where the regiment secured Oran with scarcely a shot being fired. From Algeria the regiment entrained for the fighting in Tunisia, and participated in battles at Maktar, Medjez el Bab, the Kasserine Pass, Gafsa, El Guettar, Beja, and Mateur. From the end of the Tunisian campaign to early July 1943 the Regiment trained further on amphibious assault technique, necessary for the spearhead of the invasion of Sicily, July 10. The Regiment engaged in several sharp, fierce battles before going into Division reserve, from which the Regiment conducted aggressive patrolling.

The Regiment returned to the British Isles at the end of October 1943 to prepare for the coming invasion of Europe. The 16th Infantry was part of the initial assault wave to hit Omaha Beach. The regiment absorbed tremendously high casualties and pushed through a narrow gap, enabling the Division to secure Formigny and Caumont. Fighting through the hedgerows, the regiment followed up the breakthrough at St. Lo with an attack on Marigny on July 27. Fighting continuously across France, they reached German soil by September 1944, striking the Siegfried Line. The Regiment participated in the Divisional assault and capture of Aachen on October 21. The Regiment then fought through the Hurtgen Forest, pushing to the Roer River before being taken out of the line for a well-deserved rest. The rest was short-lived, however, as the Division was called upon to help stem the tide of the German Ardennes counter-offensive. After blunting, then turning back the German thrust, the regiment pushed forward offensively, again breaching the Siegfried Line, across the Roer, driving to the Rhine, crossing at the Remagen bridgehead. Breaking-out of the bridgehead, the Regiment participated in the envelopment of the Ruhr pocket and captured thousands of prisoners and several cities and towns. The regiment then drove through the Harz Mountains into Czechoslovakia, there the Regiment was advancing when V-E Day stopped them. The regiment remained in Germany after the war, serving as part of the occupation troops.

The series is subdivided into two subseries, each subseries containing histories, after action reports, journals, news clippings, newspapers, operations reports, S-1, S-2, S-3, military government reports, and miscellaneous materials from Army, Corps, and Division. Approximately one-half of the series is composed of regimental journals. The series is arranged according to the DRB classification system and chronologically thereunder.

2400 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1275-1277

The 26th Infantry Regiment was an organic element of the first Infantry Division, the "Big Red One". The 26th Infantry Regiment was organized on February 2, 1901 by an act of Congress. It participated in the 1901-02. During World War I the 26th Infantry saw heavy fighting at Cantigny and in the Soissons and Argonne offensives. During World War II the 26th Infantry, along with the remainder of the 1st Infantry Division, participated in invasions and operations in North Africa, Sicily, Normandy, Northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, and the Central European campaign. After the war in Europe ended, the 26th Infantry remained in Germany on occupation duty.

The records of the 26th Infantry Regiment contain a regimental history for the period 1941-46, detailed histories of operations in North Africa and Sicily, after action reports, unit reports, unit journals, S-2 and S-3 reports, organization day materials, other historical materials, rosters, maps and overlays, and a few news clippings.

The most detailed historical and operational reports pertain to North Africa, Sicily, and the capture of Aachen. Some of the unit journals also provide details on operations in Normandy, Northern France, and Rhineland. An S-3 journal contains some information on the Battle of the Bulge.

Considerable information on the pre-World War II history of the 26th Infantry Regiment and its parent division, the "Big Red One", can be found in the significant quantity of organization day and miscellaneous historical materials contained in these records. Particularly noteworthy are the extracts from the War Department's report on the campaign against the Philippine insurgents in 1901-02 War I. A few items also reflect the unit's activities during the 1920s and 1930s.

This series is organized according to the classification scheme of the Departmental records Branch and chronologically thereafter.

Box 1290-1291

The 35th Infantry Regiment was a component unit of the 25th Infantry Division, which participated in the Guadalcanal, Vella Lavella, and Luzon campaigns and served on occupation duty in Japan. The regiment landed at Guadalcanal November 25, 1942 and participated in the reduction of the final pockets of enemy resistance. On July 21, 1943 the Regiment captured Vella Lavella. The Regiment landed on Luzon January 11, 1945 and participated in cleanup operations until leaving for occupation duty in Japan September 20, 1945. The 35th was stationed in Japan until ordered to Korea in 1950.

This series consists of unit histories, Journals, and periodic reports dealing with the Regiment's combat in World War II and occupation duty in Japan. The series is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch. Of special interest is the Combat History of the Luzon Campaign and the S-2 Periodic Reports dealing with occupation duty in 1946.

The 38th Infantry Regiment was a component part of the 2nd Infantry Division. It entered combat during World War II on June 7, 1944, after landing on Omaha Beach in Northern France, the day after D-Day. For the remainder of the war it participated in various operations and engagements in the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe campaigns.

The records of the 38th Infantry Regiment consist of histories, after action reports, journals and miscellaneous documents. The after action reports and the unit journals provide a fairly complete account of the combat operations of the Regiment. There is also fragmentary material on the Regiment's training activities in the U.S. and Northern Ireland Prior to landing in France, and on its activities in the U.S. in the late 1940s.

The 47th Infantry Regiment was an organic element of the 9th Infantry Division. This Division was activated in 1940 and participated in the invasion of North Africa in 1942. After participating in the Algeria-French Morocco, Tunisia and Sicily campaigns the Division moved to England where it prepared for the Normandy Invasion. It landed on Utah Beach on June 10, 1944, and went on to take part in the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, and Central Europe campaigns. Members of the 47th Regiment were the first infantry troops to cross the Rhine River at Remagen. After the war the Regiment was on occupation duty in Germany until the end of 1946 when it returned to the United States.

The records of the 47th Regiment contain histories, after action reports, operational reports and journals. The material has been arranged into two subseries. The first subseries contains information on the Regiment as a whole. These records pertain mostly to the operations of the Regiment in Europe from June 1944 to December 1946. There is much detail on the occupation duties of the Regiment. Of particular interest is a short narrative history of the Regiment covering its early training activities in the United States.

The second subseries contains information on the battalions and companies which were part of the Regiment. Most of these records cover the period prior to the Normandy Invasion. The battalion and company histories contain much information on the North Africa and Sicily campaigns. Of particular interest is a field order from the Third Battalion which described defensive measures to be taken in England in the event of a German invasion. The journal of the First Battalion contains information on the Dachau concentration camp where the battalion was stationed in August 1945.

The 65th Infantry Regiment, initially organized in Puerto Rico in 1899, was reorganized and brought up to war strength in 1940. During 1942 the regiment, composed almost entirely of Puerto Ricans, was deployed along the coasts and vital installation of Puerto Rico. During 1943 the unit provided security for the Panama Canal. During 1944 and 1945 the regiment participated in the Naples-Foggia and the Rhineland campaigns.

The series contains a regimental history, record of events, and S-2 periodic reports. The material is not organized into subseries but is organized according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically thereunder.

112th INFANTRY REGIMENT, 1943-1945

2100 Pages (approximate)
Boxes 1326 – 1328

The 112th Infantry Regiment was originally an element of the Pennsylvania National Guard. In 1941 it was integrated into the national army and made an organic element of the 28th Infantry Division. As part of the Division, the Regiment received training in the United States but did not enter combat until it landed in Normandy in July 1944. For the remainder of the war in Europe it participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe campaigns.

The records of the 112th Infantry Regiment consist of historical reports and journals which give a detailed account of the Regiment in Europe. The unit reports, which describe the activities of the entire Regiment, also contain field orders and administrative material which supplement the historical reports. Of particular interest in this series is a historical file containing a compiled history of the regiment prior to World War II. The history gives an especially detailed account of the Regiment's activities in the Spanish-American War and World I.

The 115th Infantry Regiment, an organic unit of the 29th Infantry Division, landed on the beaches of Normandy on D-Day (June 6, 1944). For the remainder of the war in Europe the regiment participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Normandy, Northern Europe, Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns. Following the war the regiment, along with other elements of the 29th Division, served on occupation duty in Bremen, Germany until the end of 1945. The unit was inactivated January 17, 1946 at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey.

The series contains histories, after action reports, battle lessons, and S-3 periodic reports. The material is organized according to the Departmental Records Branch classification scheme and chronologically thereunder.

8000 pages (approximate)

Box 1332

The 116th Infantry Regiment was an organic element of the 29th Infantry Division. This division was activated in 1941 and received training in the United States before moving to England in 1942. The 116th Regiment took part in the Normandy invasion and were in the first assault wave to hit the beaches on D-Day. For the remainder of the war the Division participated in the Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns. After the war it served on occupation duty in Bremen, Germany until the end of 1945.

The records of the 116th Regiment consist primarily of after action reports. Of particular interest is the report from June 1944 describing the regiment's role in the Normandy Invasion. Additional information on regimental operations can be found in the S-3 journals which cover the period from January to September 1945. These provide details on the occupation duties of the regiment.

Other records in this series include a brief narrative history compiled in 1943. This history contains information on the service of the regiment in World War I. Also of interest is the Carroll File. The Hollywood actress Madeleine Carroll as designated the "Daughter of the Regiment" because of her role in a movie portraying the regiment's home state of Virginia. The Carroll file details her acceptance of the honor and her visit to the regiment in March 1942.

141st INFANTRY REGIMENT, 1940-1945

2,000 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1363-1366

The 141st Infantry Regiment was an organic element of the 36th Infantry Division.. This division was activated in 1940 and spent over two years on National Guard duty in Texas and Massachusetts. It entered combat in September 1943 when it invaded Italy at the Gulf of Salerno. In August 1944 the Division invaded Southern France where it participated in the Southern France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns.

The records of the 141st Infantry Regiment contain historical narratives, periodic reports, journals, messages, correspondence, and map overlays. Most of the material covers the period from 1943 to 1945 when the Regiment was in actual combat. However, about one-third of the series concerns the early history and the National Guard duties of the Regiment.

The records have been divided into two subseries, each of which is arranged chronologically. Although the second subseries consists solely of S-3 Periodic Reports, the first subseries is more diversified. Among the more important records are narrative histories, which give a general account of the activities of the Regiment, and journals, which provide information on day-to-day operations. For more information on the history of the 141st Regiment, see the records of the 36 Infantry Division.

The 142nd and 143rd Regiments were organic elements of the 36th Infantry Division. This division was activated in 1940 and spent over two years on National Guard duty in Texas and Massachusetts. It entered combat in September 1943 when it invaded Italy at the Gulf of Salerno. In August 1944 the Division invaded Southern France where it participated in the Southern France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns.

The activities of the 142nd and 143rd Regiments are incompletely documented in this series. The records of the 142nd Regiment, which amount to roughly 60 pages, consist of two historical reports. These give a narrative account of the Regiment's activities during December 1944 and September 1945. The records of the 143rd Regiment amount to roughly 240 pages. These consist of the medical history of the Regiment during its National Guard duty and operations instructions and map overlays dating from October 1944. For further information on the general history of the 142nd and 143rd Regiments, see the records of the 36 Infantry Division.

The 162nd Infantry Regiment was an organic element of the 41st Infantry Division. Prior to its induction into federal service the "Sunset" Division consisted of National Guard units from the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana. It was activated 16 September 1940, one of the original four national Guard divisions called to active duty. From September 1940 through February 1942 the Division trained basic and advanced troops, engaged in small-unit exercises, and participated with distinction in the several larger war games held during the days preceding Pearl Harbor. During late February and early March, 1942, the Division was moved by rail to the East Coast, the 162 Infantry Regiment boarding the S.S. Santa Paula for Uruguay on 1 March and sailing for Australia on 3 March 1942. Among the earliest American troops committed offensively in battle, the Regiment fought in the New Guinea campaign at Buna-Gona-Sanananda, Salamaua, Wakde, Aitape, and Hollandia; invaded and secured Biak Island; and then cleared the Zamboanga Peninsula, Palawan and the Sulu Archipelago. Following the Japanese surrender the Regiment was ordered to occupy areas of Southern Honshu, where the Division was inactivated 31 December 1945 and returned home to the United States.

The records of the Regiment are primarily reports of operations written for the Adjutant General's Office at the official termination of specific actions. The records also contain a regimental Historical report, unit reports, patrol reports, and lower-level battalion and company reports. The series has been divided into two subseries: (1) Regimental reports, and (2) Battalion and Company reports.

For more information concerning the activities of the 162nd Infantry Regiment, see the records of the 41st Infantry Division.
